FOREWORD

The Monroe Fordham Regional History Center was established at Buffalo State College by Dr. Muriel A. Howard, President, in April 2001. Its mission is to deepen the understanding of the richness of the history of the Buffalo/Niagara region. One way in which this mission can be sustained is through collaboration with vital community groups such as The Michigan Street Preservation Corporation of Buffalo, New York to make priceless collections of historical papers accessible to scholars and interested citizens alike. This initial publication of the Center is a modest contribution toward that end. This Index to the Papers of the Rev. Dr. J. Edward Nash provides guidance not only to the intellectual and cultural life of a distinguished Buffalonian, but also the rich heritage of the region’s African-American community. The Center is pleased to offer this publication to the community as the beginning of a series to promote the history of our region.

The Nash Papers, Rev. Dr. J. Edward
1868 - 1957
Pastor, Michigan Avenue Baptist Church (1892-1953)
Buffalo, New York

The first cache of J. Edward Nash Papers that were discovered in the Nash House consisted of “approximately 140 linear feet of books and periodicals, and over 50 linear feet of manuscript materials.” The manuscript materials were rough sorted and placed in archival boxes by archivist Rodney Gorme Obien and stored in the University of Buffalo Archives. At that time, the manuscript papers totaled 31 boxes of materials. About two years after the discovery, those materials were placed on loan to the Afro-American Historical Association of the Niagara Frontier to be prepared for microfilming. More materials were found at the Nash House site and were added to the original manuscript Papers. The newly discovered boxes were removed from the attic of the home by students from Kevin Cottrell’s class in the African-American Studies Department at the University of Buffalo. The entire manuscript collection was sorted, organized into file folders, indexed, and prepared for microfilming by Monroe Fordham (Professor Emeritus, Buffalo State College History Department), Mrs. Freddie M. Fordham, and Mrs. Madeline O. Scott (all members of the Afro-American Historical Association of the Niagara Frontier). The listing of letters in the correspondence folders was typed by Sandy Miller, a student in Dr. Jean Richardson’s graduate history class at Buffalo State College. The materials were microfilmed in the Monroe Fordham Regional History Center at Buffalo State College. The microfilming was done by the following students; Sandy Miller, LaShawanda Ingram, Iesha Phillips, and Charita Jackson (students at Buffalo State College); Tanisha Fordham (Academy of the Sacred Heart H.S., to fulfill her community service volunteer requirement); and by Ferris McAlpine, Santosha Hayes, Nya Wielbon, and Shyvonne Holmes (students from Cottrell’s class, African-American Studies Department, University of Buffalo). All of the college students who microfilmed were paid from a grant provided by the African-American Studies Department at the University of Buffalo. The students who did the microfilming were supervised by Monroe Fordham and Dr. Felix Armfield (History Department, Buffalo State College). Armfield audi-taped an interview of Jesse Nash, Jr., a transcript of that interview is in folder #268. (Dr. Armfield also sorted, organized, indexed and microfilmed the “Frances J. Nash Papers”—a separate collection of materials).

Rev. Nash knew for certain that we were coming behind him, and that we would find his papers and “do the right thing” in preserving them for posterity. He may not have known our precise identities or when we would come, but in his spiritual mind, he was absolutely confident that we would come. And so, over the span of most of his life, he assembled this remarkable collection of personal papers.

That very thought posed a question that puzzled me for a long time. What enabled Rev. Nash to summon the confidence, and the assurance, that the papers that he had carefully saved over a life-time would be managed and preserved in a way that would allow posterity to have access to them? The personal papers of Black Americans usually ended up on the trash heap after their demise. What enabled Rev. Nash to know with such seeming certainty that his papers would be an exception to that rule?

That is an especially perplexing question when one considers the historical context of Rev. Nash’s early life. He began saving his personal papers almost a quarter of a century before Dr. Carter G. Woodson founded the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History. Moreover, at that time, very few established historical agencies would have been even remotely interested in Afro-American history, not to mention the personal papers of a little known black man. What gave Rev. Nash the audacity to think that the papers and historical evidence of his life and times would be preserved for posterity? Certainly, there were no existing persons or agencies that were possibilities for performing that task.

During the process of helping to sort through and create a filing system for his extremely large collection, I was able to read some of his letters, his sermons, poetry, speeches, and other unpublished writings. It was then that the answer to the puzzling question became clear. In my mind I posed the question to Rev. Nash: What makes you think that all of the papers and materials that you have meticulously saved for more than half-a-century will be preserved for posterity’s access after you are dead and gone? I think that his answer to my question would have been simple and straightforward. “God didn’t say anything to me about preserving and preparing those materials for posterity’s access. He just instructed me to save them. In God’s own time, he will send forces to preserve them in a format that will allow posterity to access them.”

And in time he did. He sent Kevin Cottrell and George K. Arthur. He sent the Michigan Street Preservation Corporation, the Afro-American Historical Association of the Niagara Frontier, Buffalo State College, and numerous other entities with expertise and resources. And he will send more.

For me, there is a powerful spiritual message in all of this—do the job well that providence has assigned to you, and keep the faith. God will take care of the big picture.
THE NASH HOUSE

The house at 36 Nash Street (Buffalo, NY) has a very special place in the 20th century history of Buffalo's African-American community. From 1925 until 1987, the residence was the homestead of the Rev. J. Edward Nash, Sr. family. Rev. Nash was the pastor of the Michigan Avenue Baptist Church from 1892 until his retirement in 1953. His widow continued to occupy the home after his death in 1957. She died in 1987.

Rev. Nash's leadership and presence in Buffalo's African-American community during the first 50 years of the 20th century earned him legendary status in that community. During most of that period he was the most widely known and respected African-American in the city. Rev. Nash was involved in the efforts to bring branches of the Urban League and the NAACP to Buffalo. He was a long-time leader and treasurer of the Western New York Baptist Association. For 32 years he was secretary of the Ministers Alliance of Buffalo. That inter-racial body was one of the most influential religious groups in Buffalo. Rev. Nash called and led several community political meetings of black Buffalonians to intercede on behalf of local black citizens who were in danger of being wronged because of their race.

Because he was widely respected by the city's white leadership, Rev. Nash had direct access to the mayor and other local elected officials. He often used his access to elected officials and business leaders to gain benefits for the African-American community and/or its individual citizens.

Rev. Nash had a statewide and national reputation. In 1910 he was host to Booker T. Washington during Washington's meeting with "Afro-American Citizens of Buffalo." An invitation and printed program found in papers that were recently discovered in Rev. Nash's study at 36 Nash Street, indicates that the famous Tuskegee educator met with "Afro-American Citizens of Buffalo" on Thursday evening, March 10, 1910 at the Michigan Street Baptist Church. (That invitation and program are filmed in folder #434) Washington was introduced at that meeting by Rev. Nash. Washington apparently gave a second address that night at Buffalo's Westminster Methodist Church to a largely white audience of "several hundred people, who listened to an instructive exposition on the problems of the black race." The second address was reported by the Buffalo Daily Courier on March 11 in an article titled "Only Hear Worst side, Never Best Says Negro Educator." Rev. Nash was an officer in the local branch of the national Afro-American Business League (see folder #6).

A close friend and former classmate of Rev. Nash at Virginia Union College was Adam Clayton Powell, Sr. (pastor of Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church). Rev. Powell was an occasional guest minister at the Michigan Avenue Baptist Church, and a guest in the Nash home at 36 Potter Street (now Nash Street). Rev. Powell was the guest speaker at Rev. Nash’s 50th anniversary celebration as pastor of the Michigan Street Baptist Church (see folder # 18). The "Correspondence" folders contain many letters to and from Rev. Powell.

Many of Rev. Nash's sermons and letters that are an integral part of Buffalo's African-American community history were written in his study at 36 Nash Street. (Literally hundreds of Rev. Nash’s sermon outlines, sermons, speeches and speech notes are filmed in the microfilmed collection-see folders 337-398, and 400-406). Many of the nationally known African-American leaders that Rev. Nash brought to Buffalo were house guests at 36 Nash Street. Some of the important unwritten events in the history of Buffalo's African-American community were probably first conceptualized, discussed, and set in motion in the Nash home at 36 Nash Street. (Papers from the Nash collections will certainly confirm such assumptions).

In October, 1999, a delegation of members of the Michigan Street Preservation Corporation were taken on a tour of the inside of the former Nash home by Bishop William Henderson. Jesse Nash, Jr., owner of the house, had allowed Bishop Henderson to occupy the bottom floor of the Nash home since the late 1980s when the elderly Mrs. Frances J. Nash gave up residence. Members of the Michigan Street Preservation group were keenly aware of the historic significance of the Nash home, but they were not prepared for what they found inside the house.

When the Michigan Street Preservation group walked into Rev. Nash's personal quarters and study, it was as though they had entered a time capsule, a time capsule that had been left by Rev. Nash himself. The furniture, typewriter, desk, victrola, and other furnishings were in good condition. His letters, papers, and books seemed undisturbed since their last use by Rev. Nash. The upstairs was a virtual museum of African-American home furnishings from the pre-WWII era. It was apparent that Mrs. Nash did not disturb the contents in her husband's “space” following his death. Bishop Henderson also kept that part of the house closed off and undisturbed after he moved in.

Later the Michigan Street Preservation tour group would discuss their feelings and thinking at the moment of discovery. Even without communicating with each other, they had all reached the same conclusion. That is, that the Nash Home was a community treasure, a time capsule, and a potential community museum that should be restored, protected, and shared with the larger society. The Home and its contents was a valuable piece of the 20th century history of the Buffalo African-American community.

During the weeks following the aforementioned discoveries at the Nash Home, the Michigan Street Preservation Corporation consulted with numerous authorities, including representatives from the Buffalo-Erie County Historical Society, Ted Lownie (an architect who specializes in restoring and preserving historic properties), legal advisors from Kavinoky & Cook LLP, and community leaders about steps to be taken in preserving the Nash Papers, restoring the Nash House and opening it to the public as a community museum and education facility.

The Michigan Street Preservation Corporation has launched a campaign to redevelop and restore the historic neighborhood around the Nash House, which includes the Michigan Street Baptist Church (built in 1845), the site of the former Little Harlem Supper Club, the Colored Musicians Club, and the numerous dwellings that made up the once thriving community. The first priorities of the Michigan Street group are to preserve the Nash Papers. After that, they plan to restore the Nash House and create a community museum. This microfilming project completes the preservation of the Nash manuscript collection. The original papers have been placed in archival format and preserved in an acid free environment. Many of the papers are very fragile and cannot stand up to extensive use. However, the microfilmed format allows researchers to freely utilize them. The group’s architect has developed a plan for restoring the historic dwelling. They have received a grant to restore the outside, and work is scheduled to begin soon. The overall Michigan Street Preservation Corporation’s plan is being coordinated by Kevin Cottrell and George K. Arthur. Cottrell is employed by the Office of New York State Parks and Historic Preservation, and George Arthur is a longtime advocate for community development and retired former President of the Buffalo Common Council.

The Papers of Rev. Dr. J. Edward Nash, and those of his wife Mrs. Frances Jackson Nash, represent one of the most significant discoveries in African American historiography. The microfilmed papers are part of the Buffalo Afro-American Microfilmed Collection. Copies of that Collection are presently housed in the North Jefferson Branch Library and Center for African American History and Research; the Butler Library Archives at Buffalo State College; and The Monroe Fordham Regional History Center, Buffalo State College. Researchers are encouraged to use the collection. The original papers are owned by the Michigan Street Preservation Corporation and will eventually be part of the Nash House and Community Museum.

5 Afro-American Business Company
   A 1910 “dues book” (which belonged to Rev. Nash), the organization’s “constitution and by-laws,” and officers. The booklet indicates that the Afro-American Business Company was a Buffalo group that was organized in 1899. Information in the next folder suggests that this group was the Buffalo branch of the national Afro-American Business League, Pre-1905.

6 Afro-American Business League
   A letter certifying Rev. Nash as a member and officer in the company’s Buffalo Branch. And a telegram from Booker T. Washington and T. Thomas Fortune, 1905.

7 Allegany Baptist Association
   Minutes of the Annual Session, 1928.

8 American Baptist Convention
   An announcement of a session of the American Baptist Convention at the Michigan Street Baptist Church, 1951.

9 American Baptist Home Mission Society
   Commissions to Rev. Nash to serve as agent in Buffalo for the years, 1901-1914.

10 Anderson, Amelia G.
   Mrs. Anderson was one of the organizers of the Buffalo Branch NAACP.
   Folder contains stationery listing first?? Officers of the Buffalo Branch. Also list of members of the Buffalo Branch, 1916.

112 Correspondence with Soldiers, 1943

This folder contains correspondence from soldiers to Rev. Nash. The letters indicate that many of the soldiers were members of the Michigan Street Church. These letters often contained photographs of soldiers, often in army life poses. (Photographs are filmed in folder # 305. The actual photographs are preserved in binders that are in the possession of the Michigan Street Preservation Corp.) There may also be correspondence to and from soldiers in other folders.

King, G.M.P. Memorial Gate
Rev. Nash was a graduate of Virginia Union Univ. That school also graduated many of the people who would become race leaders in the first half of the 20th century. G.M.P. King was apparently a very popular teacher at the school who had retired by 1913. Rev. Nash launched a campaign to get former alumni of the school to contribute money to build a monument to Mr. King. This folder contains much of the correspondence from that campaign. There are letters from many of the prominent alumni who sent money and/or letters of encouragement to Rev. Nash. Rev. Nash convinced Booker T. Washington to serve on an honorary committee that supported the idea, 1913 and 1914. The folder also contains the speech that Rev. Nash gave at the memorial dedication. Some correspondence on this topic may also be found in other folders.
